

This is my final character design turnaround; the character was developed against the prompt of “Winter”. I have always liked character designs where they look grumpy all the time, which carried over to this week’s rotation. The inspiration behind this design comes from a song named “Here” by Alessia Cara, where she sings about being stuck at a social situation as an introvert. All she wants to do is leave and enjoy her alone time. I experimented with various designs with the prompt winter, but I decided to go with this one because I really like the posture that I drew her in. I like the curvature of her body and the slouched shoulders making her seem impatient but still standing there with class. During the colouring process, I used a dry ink brush to create a more hand-drawn texture, even though it’s not very clear on a small screen, I still really like the grainy effect that it gives.
